SIDNEY LIBRARY MEMBERS MEET

A meeting of the members of the Sidney Library took place in the Wesley Hall, Tuesday evening.

The chairman, Rev. G. T. Griffiths, after calling upon the secretary-treasurer, Mr. J. T. Taylor, to read the financial position, in his opening remarks explained the purpose of the meeting. The question before the meeting was whether the library should be continued, if so, what steps should be taken to put it in a sound financial position. It was resolved that in view of the undoubted benefit of the library that it should continue and a canvassing committee be appointed to secure more members. It is necessary in order to pay expenses that there should be one hundred members. Ladies and gentlemen throughout the district are invited to join, $1 per year. Any book required can be ordered and books can be exchanged every day of the week. The new year commences now. Action must be taken at once.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT TO BERT JOHNSTON

The many friends of Mr. Bert Johnston, who until recently resided in Sidney, but now of Kendal, Wash., U.S.A., will be sorry to hear that he met with a serious accident while working in his mill. He was filing the head saw when in some manner the machine started and he was caught between the saws and badly injured having several ribs broken and a severe cut on one arm. Luckily for Mr. Johnston the upper saw broke or he would have been cut in two, as it was his life was in danger for two days. His parents were sent for, but at the time this news was received the danger was passed and he is expected to recover.

PERSONAL AND LOCAL NEWS FROM SATURNA

Mr. Harold Payne Speaks Very Highly of the New Sailing Boats Known as The Star

(Review Correspondent.) SATURNA ISLAND, June 1.—The mild rains which we have been enjoying the last ten days or so, have made the islands look beautifully fresh and green, and we still can feel spring in the air, although June is here to tell us that summer is well upon its way. This is the season during which the islands are at their very best, and appear as a summer paradise to campers and holiday seekers.

Mr. T. Bartlett has returned to the island to stay with his daughter, Mrs. H. Loosmore. Mr. Bartlett has spent the last six months in Arizona and says he is very glad to get back to a country where there are green fields and trees. The heat in Arizona is terrific, 98 in the shade even at this time of year, and the only relief for the drought comes in great cloud-bursts which lay waste the country for miles, washing out bridges and railroads.

Mr. Fosnes, who has been away for some time, returned on Saturday for a short visit. He is leaving again in a few days for Victoria.

Mrs. G. F. Payne and the Rev. H. Payne returned last week, from a ten day's trip to Harrison Hot Springs. Miss K. Payne, who accompanied them, returned with her sister, Miss D. Payne, on Saturday, having stayed over in Victoria for the 24th May celebrations. Miss D. Payne has just completed a successful year at the Provincial Normal school in Victoria.

Mrs. A. Ralph left on Wednesday, via the Island Princess, to spend a few weeks holiday with her sister in Victoria.

Mrs. D. MacFayden returned to the island on Wednesday after spending a week in town. She brought with her as her guest, Miss Jago, of Langford. Miss Caroline Deacon, of Mayne Island, is taking care of Mrs. Ralph's small son while she is away.

Mr. W. B. Woods, who has been on the island for the last six weeks, left on Thursday to join a government survey party, for the summer.

Mr. Bruce Irving after spending a few days leave with his family on South Pender, left on Wednesday for River's Inlet, where he has the position of policeman for the summer.

Major Pender left last week for Princeton, B.C. where he has joined a survey party.

Mrs. Leonard Higgs left for England last Friday; she expects to be away about six months. Her son W. Higgs accompanied her as far as Vancouver, returning to South Pender at the beginning of the week.

Mr. Herbert Spalding, who has been working all spring at a large camp on Frederick's Arm, was home for a few days last week but has now returned to work, up North.

Mr. G. Payne has been away in Vancouver, on business, the greater part of this week. He returned on Friday.

Mr. John Brown, who has been employed on the island for some time, left on Thursday for Victoria.

A large Vancouver tug, the "Master," arrived in Boat Bay last night with a boom for the saw-mill. Consequently, operations are in full swing today, under the new management.

Mr. Harold Payne and his son, Reg., arrived on Tuesday from Victoria on the yacht "Kid." They had a splendid breeze all the way up and did not have to engine once, not even when navigating the small channel known as the "Portage" between North and South Pender. They brought splendid reports of the new sailing boats known as the Star boats and belonging to the Star class of racing sail boats. These fine little boats are now much in favor among yachtsmen, and nearly all the clubs on the Pacific coast boast of one or two of these splendid sailing craft. They are very fast even in the lightest winds, and as they are all built on identically the same plans, some very good and close inter-club and international racing ought to take place on the coast waters this summer. The Victoria yacht club has two of these Star boats, the "Milly Way" owned by Major Buck, of Sidney, and Mr. H. Payne, of Victoria, and the "Mintaka" owned by E. B. Marvin & Co., of Victoria. The Cowichan Yacht Club also owns one of these Star boats and several races

CHILDREN'S DAY AT SIDNEY A SUCCESS

The Grand Procession was a credit to a place the size of Sidney. Great Praise Due to the Organising Committee

The crowning of the Queen of the May, Miss Phyllis McKillican, was one of the features of Children's Day, which took place last Saturday. Her Majesty rode in the parade on a large decorated float, drawn by a team of horses driven by Mr. N. Watts, who was dressed as John Bull. Seated on a throne, made in the form of a rose, was the May Queen, attended by her six maids of honor, Misses Ivy Hill, Winnifred Taylor, Mavis Goddard, Adeline Crossley, Mabel Crooks and Barbara Parker; last year's Queen, Miss Hazel Hill, and two little pages, Masters John Speedie and Clarence Shade.

Commencing at the Bank corner on Beacon avenue, the parade moved up to the War Memorial Park, went around the grounds, and came to a halt. Mrs. Veitch, the president of the North Saanich Women's Institute, introduced Dr. D. Warnock, superintendent of Women's Institutes, who gave a short address, expressing his pleasure and that of Mrs. Warnock at being present. On behalf of the Institute, Mrs. B. Deacon moved a vote of thanks to Dr. Warnock, and presented Mrs. Warnock with a box of chocolates.

Her Majesty Queen Phyllis, with her retinue, then alighted from the float, taking her seat upon her throne, which was placed on the platform. There she was crowned by Miss Hazel Hill, the last year's Queen, and received the obeisance of the maids of honor and pages, after which Mrs. Warnock, on behalf of the Institute, presented Her Majesty with a beautiful string of pearls and each of the maids of honor with a gift. The sports were then proceeded with.

Queen Phyllis was charming in a white Swiss organdie dress, trimmed with radium insertion, with a train of tulle trimmed with silver and pink. She wore a dainty crown of silver tissue with pink and white rosebuds. The little maids of honor and pages were prettily dressed and crowned.

A dance around the Maypole by twenty-four little girls, under the guidance of Mrs. Mason, was very pretty. Mrs. Abell was responsible for the decorating of the float, which was beautifully done. Mrs. Ramsay and Mrs. Hambley did the work in connection with the procession. Mr. Warrender and Mr. C. Wemyss were kept busy at the gate, there being a good attendance.

The prizes were awarded as follows: Best Decorated Boys' Bicycle, 1. Donald MacDonald, representing the "Boy Scouts"; Collin McKenzie, "The Anacortes Ferry," which was very cleverly done. Girls' Bicycles—1. Gertrude Cochran and Virginia Goddard, "The Sidney Review"; 2. Florence Hambley, "The N.S.W.I."; 3. Rhoda Craig, "The N.S.W.I." Baby Buggies—1. Miss Agnes Craig, beautifully done with white and pink rosebuds; 2. Lillian Lidgate; 3. Theresa Thomas. Doll Buggies—1. Winnifred Taylor; 2. Edna Holdridge; 3. Helen Lidgate; 4. Alvin Cochran; 5. Wilma Crichton, these were all very dainty. Clowns—1. Bertie Ward, as Charlie Chaplin; 2. Willie Lidgate, as Jack in a box; 3. Arthur Gibbon, a clown. Advertisements—1. Edgar Gibbon, as C.P.R. chef; 2. Mary Jackson, as Dutch Cleanser; 3. Bessie Jackson, as magazines. Best Dressed Up Dog—Austin Wilson's dog, as a clown.

The races were run off very expeditiously under the charge of Mr. J. Hambley, the prize winners being: Boys under 6—1. Jack Campbell; 2. Raymond Byers; 3. James Miller. Girls under 6—1. Maisie Miller; 2. V. Clanton. Boys under 7—1. Freddie McLean; 2. Laddie McNaught. Girls under 7—1. Lillie Robertson; 3. Helen Lidgate. Boys under 8—1. Fred Musclow; 2. Joe Brewster. Girls under 8—1. Margaret Miller; 2. Elsie Chancellor. Boys under 9—1. Gordon Nicholl; 2. Ernest Roberts. Girls under 9—1. Pauline Clanton; 2. Stella Cooper. Boys under 10—1. Bobby Lane; 2. Jamie Brewster. Girls under 10—1. Muriel Holdridge; 2. Elizabeth Campbell. Boys under 11—1. Frank Holdridge; 2. Arthur Gibbon. Girls under 11—1. Theresa Thomas; 2. Annette Brewster. Boys under 12—1. Frank Holdridge; 2. P. Clanton. Girls under 12—1. Muriel Holdridge; 2. Edna McKillican. Boys under 14—1. E. Jackson; 2. Bertie Ward. Girls under 14—1. Alma Gorton; 2. Annie Miller. Boys under 15—1. Tom Wiley; 2. Bertie Ward. Girls under 16—1. Katie Lorenzen; 2. Dorothy Gilman. Three-legged race, boys—Bertie Ward and Melvin Clanton. Three-legged race, girls—Annie Peterson and Anah Jackson. Tug-of-war, girls vs. boys—Won by the girls, 10 on each side, Edith Wilson, Hazel Hill, Joan Wright, Lilah Pohl, Verna Clanton, Annie Peterson, Evelyn Stacy, Nellie Engnes, Dorothy Gilman, Olive Gilman. Tug-of-war, Sidney vs. Boys Naval Brigade—Won by Sidney.

The tea booth was under the charge of Mrs. F. Philp, assisted by Mrs. Jeffrey, Mrs. Crossley, Mrs. Jackson, Miss Dundas, Miss Rosam, Miss Beryl Hope and Miss Phyllis Parkes. The ice cream stall, in charge of Mrs. J. T. Taylor and Mrs. Whiting, did a brisk trade, as also the soft drinks under the care of Mr. Ramsay and W. J. Wakefield. The candy stall, under Mrs. B. Deacon, assisted by Mrs. Ramsay and Mr. Copeland, was well patronized, the gay flags and balloons finding favor with the little folk.

A junior lacrosse match between Esquimalt and Sidney resulted in a win for the former by 11 goals to 3. The winners were the heavier team, but it was good experience for the Sidney boys to get up against a stronger team.

PRETTY WEDDING AT ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

The marriage of Miss Gertrude Harrison and Mr. Joseph Mitchell took place at St. Andrew's church on Wednesday evening at 8 p.m. before a large congregation, the church being packed to the door. The Rev. T. M. Hughes being the officiating clergyman. The bride entered the church on the arm of her brother, Mr. Herbert Harrison, to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march. The bride was dressed in a very pretty coral Canton crepe dress, trimmed with silver trimming, and pearl necklace, wearing a grey georgette hat with flower trimming, carrying a basket of pink and white carnations. The bridesmaid was dressed in a mauve silk dress, trimmed with radium lace, and carrying a bouquet of pink sweet peas. Little Thora Harrison, niece of the bride, was a dainty flower girl, dressed in a pretty crepe de chine. One hymn was sung during the service, "The voice that breathed our Eden." Whilst the register was being signed, Mrs. McMullen sang very beautifully "My World" after which the organist, Mrs. B. Deacon, played Mendelssohn's wedding march.

Mr. George Mitchell, of Vancouver, brother of the groom, was best man.

The church was beautifully decorated with ferns and white carnations, pink sweet peas and marguerites, with a bow of white crepe paper and carnations on each pew, the work of the Girls' W. A., assisted by Mrs. McMullen. After the service a reception was held at the home of Mrs. T. Harrison, the bride's mother, to which only relatives and very intimate friends were invited. The happy couple left on the midnight boat for Vancouver en route for Portland, Oregon, where the honeymoon will be spent. The groom's father, who was a bridesmaid and flower girl pearl necklaces, to the best man a pair of gold cuff links. The presents were all on display in the dining room and were very much admired.

NEWS OF THE WEEK FROM MAYNE ISLAND

Mrs. G. Maude Lunched With Dr. Anne Borrow, on Her Way to Japan

(Review Correspondent.) MAYNE ISLAND, June 5.—Sunday afternoon Captain, Mrs. Den Roach and Peter called at Comfort Cottage and Point Comfort.

Monday Mrs. Maude went to Victoria.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaw were passengers on the Princess bound for Vancouver.

Guests at the Vicarage are Mrs. Becton and Miss Pierce.

There have been quite a few visitors on the island the past week, unfortunately I did not catch their names, but imagine several parties were over who were interested in the shale industry.

Mr. Clarke came over from Ganges to see Mr. Hall, he was much surprised at seeing on the island any thing so up-to-date as the Mayne Island hotel. Not only comfort in every way but the cuisine was all that one could desire. Mr. Clarke says it is surprising how little these islands are known round Vancouver as a summer resort.

Mr. T. Gurney has secured a position on S. S. Beatrice.

Mr. Jud Colison is taking a few days holiday in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Inglis went to town Saturday.

Another little house has gone up on Mayne Island. Mr. G. Shaw has turned what was Mr. MacDonald's feed shed, into a unique little building with a small verandah facing the sea and enclosed a space for a garden.

We are all very anxious to see Dr. Brant put in an appearance.

I met Miss Coates on Government street Monday she wished to be remembered to all her friends on Galiano.

Mr. Head has had great success as a water witch and has struck it rich—I mean wet—at Mr. Hall's, at a depth of 20 feet a regular gush of water was the result.

Living from Sidney to Victoria on Monday the road was pretty bumpy over the detour—the highway being under construction. The dogwood, broom and may along the highway were in the height of their beauty.

We congratulate Major Buck and Mr. H. Payne in winning the yacht race, May 26.

Mrs. G. Maude left for Vancouver Tuesday.

Fishing is the order of the day in the Pass—one boat made a haul of three large cod in five minutes.

Mr. and Mrs. J. David are visitors at Mrs. Taylor's.

Owing to a false report that the service was put off at Mr. T. Bennett's last Sunday, many who otherwise would have attended were absent.

Tuesday Mrs. Porter and Miss Pearce took the boat for Pender to meet the Vicar, who had been there since Sunday, holding services and making parochial calls. They returned on the launch Wednesday.

We hear that Miss Allie MacDonald and Rolla have the measles. Six members of Mrs. H. Payne's family are recovering from them.

I met Miss Saunders Monday. She has quite recovered from her recent illness. She thinks of forsaking Mayne this summer and trying Cowichan Lake.

The choir practice took place at Mrs. Hill's Thursday evening.

Mrs. G. Maude had the pleasure of lunching with Dr. Anne Borrow, a medical missionary, who was on her way to Japan to study the language for a year before going to Korea to continue her work in the C.M.S.

Seven years ago when the war started Dr. Borrow was recalled to England to take up medical work there. In speaking of the ministry of healing she related a wonderful case of healing, she had witnessed abroad, with a native woman. She had also attended these meetings in London and seen wonderful results. Dr. Borrow is a woman with a strong personality and fine presence.

Miss Kate Bennett is living in Oak Bay, Victoria, and is quite pleased with city life.

On June 10 the Vicar hopes to have the Bishop here and if so the Bishop will conduct evening service at St. Mary's at 7.30.

Wednesday evening Mrs. Den Roach entertained friends at five-hundred.

DR. BEALE'S HEALTH REPORT

For the last three years I have been able to report this district free from typhoid, diphtheria and scarletina, and practically free from measles and whooping cough. A case of typhoid had to be reported last year but its origin was traced to another town. I am particularly pleased to make this announcement just now for two of our more emotional inhabitants are going around prophesying appalling things from our system of drainage. These inhabitants may "dry those tears and calm those fears"—our drainage system can have a decided drawback in hot weather in some parts of the town, but it does not compare unfavorably in its freedom from the spread of disease to the most up-to-date system, and these unfounded attacks are a detriment to our business interests and unfair to property owners, for the value of a holding is apt to be impaired, even by statements that are openly foolish.

Our ridiculous sanitary regulations are mostly to blame for what inconvenience we suffer, the Provincial Constable has received orders that he "must not," mark you, not "that he need not" but that he "must not" act on any complaint made to him till he has received written instructions from me. In nine cases out of ten the complaint does not appeal to me, even where he does the Constable is without power to enforce without first obtaining authority from headquarters. The Provincial Constable acts willingly and promptly as far as his tied hands permit.

RUDE RURAL RHYMES

ADVICE TO GARDENERS

The original garden, eastward of Eden, had every kind of fruit and seed in. When man left Eden for Eden's good, he lost this old-time wholesome food. But by some thousand years' selection, we now have made a new collection. When you make a garden you want it complete, not too much carrot and too little beet. These are the kinds of truck crop things which every garden should have, by Jings. First are the leaves like spinach and chard and lettuce which fills this hard-eating hard with plenty of iron and vitamins, with strength and grace and healthful grins. The leaf crops too will furnish roughage required by tender age and tough age. The snappy snap bean in the diet has varied use and all should try it. Sweet corn we eat with some restraint—if we have sense, which this hard-hat. Your time on carrots is well spent, but catch them young and innocent. So also beets, best when they're small and better eaten tops and all, since all the leaves beneath their skins are full of iron and vitamins. Let onions too perfume the air and plant tomatoes everywhere. Your cabbage should be eaten raw—more vitamins are found in slaw. Eat onions also raw and free, and then, gosh sake, steer clear of me. The model garden should be planned for winter use both stored and canned. I urge such foods at every season, and as the ad says, there's a reason. We all you. A happier nation if we were free from constipation. There's nothing so rare as a day in June, because that month is a garden moon, and all our livers are in tune. Yet any month would be as good if we were careful of our food.

SIDNEY LOSES TO ESQUIMALT

Esquimalt's defence proved too tough for the Sidney home to break through, and as a result the stick-handlers from the naval town chalked up their first victory of the season in the Victoria and District Lacrosse league, defeating Sidney by 4 goals to 2.

The game, which was played at Sidney on Monday evening, was staged under ideal weather conditions. It was fast and clean, and while Sidney stepped along at a good pace, it could not beat the visitors' defence.

A costly accident to Marty Simpson, the Sidney goalie, may have far-reaching effects on the Victoria senior team. Simpson had a nasty spill in the last quarter and dislocated his elbow. He had to leave the field. Simpson is not only a member of the Sidney team, but also plays goal for the Victoria club, which is trying to win back the Mann Cup, and which is scheduled to play the Squamish Indians in Victoria on Saturday afternoon.

Billie Huxtable put Esquimalt ahead in the first quarter of the game, taking a fast pass from Stewart when close in. Marty Hicks shoved Esquimalt ahead another notch by slipping a fast overhead shot past Simpson. Sidney got into the scoring column before the quarter ended on McNeill's long shot.

The only mix-up of the game occurred in the opening period, when Purdy and E. Norton swapped punches. They were benched for five minutes.

The second quarter was the fastest of the game. Passmore rushed through the field and scored a pretty goal for Esquimalt soon after the whistle went, and Jenner, Sidney's centre man, bounced a hot one past Pascoe. Stan Ross ended the scoring for the game by again finding the net for Esquimalt.

The outstanding feature of the game was the effective play of Esquimalt's defence. The Sidney home, fast and active though it is, was unable to get through for many shots at Pascoe.

Frank Smith handled the game in a satisfactory manner.

After the game the Esquimalt team was entertained by Sidney.

Visit of Mr. May, Inspector of Schools, to Make Arrangements for Examinations

PENDER ISLAND, June 5.—A very successful whist drive and dance was enjoyed on Thursday evening at Port Washington, under the auspices of the local United Farmers. Refreshments were served after the drive and the dancing followed.

A gentleman by the name of Kempton, has been soliciting insurance during the past week for the Wawanesa Mutual Insurance Co. He had already canvassed a number of the other Islands, and in so doing, it is understood he tried, as he did here, to make people believe that the B.C. Mutual Insurance Co., of which Mr. A. H. Menzies is local agent, was in an insecure position, and would soon be falling to pieces. Upon receipt of enquiries from policy holders, Mr. Menzies immediately wrote his company to ascertain the facts. Replies show them to be on just as firm a basis as ever they were, and just as well off financially as the Wawanesa Company. Policy holders, therefore, need have no fears as to the possibility of their insurance failing, and our local agent wishes such statements made by Mr. Kempton to be regarded as false.

CROP REPORT

Below will be found a brief synopsis of telegraphic reports received at the Head Office of the Bank of Montreal from its branches. The branch managers have complete and intimate knowledge of each local situation and are in close touch with crop conditions in all sections of the district mentioned.

General.

Heavy rains have greatly improved growing crops throughout the Prairie Provinces and seeding has been practically completed under good weather conditions. The general outlook is favorable. In Quebec plowing has not yet been completed but despite the backward spring, the crops sown are in healthy condition. In Ontario rain has retarded seeding. The season is fully two weeks late, but vegetation is recovering from the setback. In the Maritime Provinces conditions are still unfavorable and little seeding has been done. Fruit trees have wintered well. In British Columbia prospects are good for all crops, except potatoes and small fruits. Details are as follows:

Prairie Provinces

Edmonton District—Over week-end one and half inches rain fell; the heaviest in two years. Seeding about completed. Outlook promising.

Calgary District—With exception of from Brooks eastward, district has benefited from heavy rains. Seeding practically finished. Pastures much improved. General outlook favorable. Wheat well above ground. Lethbridge District—Moisture conditions good. Wheat well above ground. Sixty percent coarse grains seeded. Hay and range grass in good condition. Prospects favorable.

Saskatoon District—Wheat seeding completed under favorable conditions. Seeding other grains will be finished in few days. Farmers have land well worked. Acreage slightly larger than last year. Most districts had rain during past few days. Prospects good, pastures in fair condition. Regina District—Wheat seeding completed under favorable conditions. Seeding coarse grains will be finished in about ten days. Weather has been dry but moisture sufficient for germination and situation improved by general rain. Prospects satisfactory. Winnipeg District—Wheat seeding completed. Grain in many places showing well above ground. Seeding coarse grains near completion. Ample moisture and good growing weather. Fall rye promising crop and to the south now in short blade.

Province of Quebec

Plowing has not been completed in some districts owing to the wetness of the lowlands. Seeding is being done as rapidly as possible. Crops that are in, though backward, are in a healthy condition. With warm weather growth should be rapid. Meadows and pasturage are showing up well.

Province of Ontario

Abundance of rain throughout the province has retarded seeding somewhat. Late frosts in some sections, but no serious damage has been done. Wheat gives good promise with fair acreage. Hay promises to be an average crop. With clover a good crop abundance of pasturage is anticipated. Growth of late has been rapid and vegetation is recovering the setback caused by the cold spring. Conditions generally are satisfactory.

Maritime Provinces

Season two or three weeks late and conditions still unfavorable. Late seeding done as yet, though planting of potatoes now in progress. Fruit trees wintered well; apple trees now in bud.

Province of British Columbia

Prospects good for crops in all lines except potatoes and small fruits. Weather conditions favorable with ample moisture, except in Ashcroft and Merritt districts. Seeding is completed. In the Okanagan Valley all fruits have set well and indicate large crops. Winter apples especially heavy. Range and pasture are above average, except in lower Cariboo and Nicola Valley, where rain badly needed. Grasshopper plague feared in Nicola district.

TRADE AT HOME

Communities grow in proportion to the support given them by their residents. You cannot boost Sidney by trading elsewhere or placing business in other localities that could be placed at home.

Folks who try to save pennies oftentimes lose dollars. The home merchant is generally honest and offers honest values for your money. He can't afford to be otherwise. He depends for his living from the community and must give the community what it wants at a fair price.

When you are tempted to trade outside and purchase "just as good merchandise at greatly reduced prices," you should think twice before peddling. If you are "stung" by your home merchant he will no doubt be glad to make an adjustment. The out-of-town merchant is not personally interested in you. He is intent on selling you this once and probably does not expect to sell to you again. He does not have to take great care in preserving your good will.

More than owing it to your community to trade at home, thus keeping your money at home, you should give the home merchant first opportunity to serve you, from a sound economic standpoint.

BETTER NOT SAY IT!

Bad news travels faster than good news. There is an old saying, "No news is good news." Let a man be converted at a church service and there is not much of a stir, but let a resident be convicted of some crime and the news leaps by word of mouth from one end of the community to the other.

How thoughtlessly unkind we sometimes are when neighbors of ours suffer misfortune! Troubles are bound to come to us all in some shape or form and what we say about our friends and acquaintances today may apply to us tomorrow. News is no respecter of persons.

We are prone to consider the ways of others not our ways when we should be watching our own step. What folks say of one another sometimes hurts more than anything they could have done. News, either good or bad, grows and becomes exaggerated and distorted with peddling. When the news is good it makes no material difference how it is exaggerated or distorted—it can never do anyone positive harm. But bad news, given wings, may bring sorrow and ruin upon people who certainly are not deserving of a punishment beyond the penalty of their mistake.

More charity for others will mean more charity for ourselves and we will gradually come to take a keener delight in reporting something good of some person than something bad. Good is constructive, bad is destructive. Just before you are about to let out a bit of "bad news," stop and think a moment. See if you can't think of something good to say in place of it. The chances are ten to one that you can and that you will.

FARM BUREAUS

In a spirit of optimism and an attitude of genuine satisfaction farmers and business men throughout the country are expressing their appreciation of the work done by Farm Bureaus wherever these organizations have been established.

One act alone that Farm Bureaus have been instrumental in putting over is worthy of their organization—the forming of co-operative marketing associations. In starting soil building programs in every county, Farm Bureaus are also doing a great constructive work of much value to every farmer. Membership in the Farm Bureau being a family proposition, one can expect some real accomplishments along specialized lines such as better preparation, more thorough cultivation, more good livestock and legislation favorable to the furtherance of agriculture and its needs.

It is well known that those who are not members of the Farm Bureau have been benefited by it. They have not benefited to the extent of the members but as in every other case the co-operative association has raised the price level and the outsider profited thereby. They have received better grades, lower interest rates on money borrowed, and nearer the market prices for their products. To these things the thousands of members will testify.

The good done by the Farm Bureaus is only a drop in the bucket to what remains for them to do and what they will do. The farmer is soon to come into his own. Organization is the force which will place him there. The business man is not the farmer's enemy for the farmer must prosper in order that the business man may make money. It's a get-together proposition and association means friendship and understanding, two mighty strong factors in themselves. A better era is just ahead. But every farmer must do his part to reap the full benefits.

STRAWBERRY CROP PROSPECTS

British Columbia

Reports from British Columbia indicate that there will be plenty of berries to supply all possible markets and demands. The season is considerably earlier than last year and excellent spring weather has prevailed in general. Strawberry plants came through the winter with very little heaving and are showing every indication of a fair yield. There is an estimated total bearing acreage of 2,000 acres as compared with 1,500 acres last year.

The present condition of the strawberry plants is generally fair with some in exceptionally good condition. A number of the plants however, bloomed late last fall and are consequently weak. Owing to the dry season last year the plants are neither of a size nor in a condition to produce heavy crops. The weather during April has been exceptionally dry with only three light showers. A heavy rain on May 9, however, did considerable good, but if the weather continues dry the crop will be reduced. The total prospective yield is about 325,000 crates, of which about one-third will be shipping stock. Marshalls' Magoons and Dunlops were in full bloom on May 9, and the later varieties were showing slight bloom.

In the Okanagan Valley the plants are in good condition and it is generally expected that there will be a heavy crop.

SERIES OF BEE-KEEPING ARTICLES

IV.—To Use Comb Foundation

What Foundation Is

Bee comb foundation is a sheet of pure beeswax run through rollers, which leave the impression of the base of the cells of honey comb imprinted on the wax. It is cut and trimmed to the several sizes required in using foundation in the various hive frames. It is impossible to adulterate comb foundation successfully since the bees readily detect such adulterations and will consequently tear down adulterated materials. Good foundation can be used after it has been kept clean, dry and from the sunlight. However it is best to use it as soon after receipt as possible.

Comb foundation was probably first invented by Mehring in 1852 and has since been improved by others, until the present production is very superior to the first samples. The use of comb foundation in frames or sections which are to be used for sale is practicable and in no way infringes on pure food laws. Since foundation is made from pure beeswax only. No artificial honey comb has ever been manufactured or sold. The National Beekeepers association offered for many years $1000 for a single sample of artificial honey-comb, which no one has ever succeeded in making. Ranking next to the invention of the movable comb hive by Langstroth, the invention of comb foundation has served to insure straight, all-worker combs and to facilitate the work of bee-keeping as no other discovery. No modern honey producer can afford to do without bee comb foundation in hives and supers.

Why Foundation Is Used

One of the primary results from using foundation is that it insures that the bees will build straight combs in each frame supplied. Modern beekeeping presupposes a liberal knowledge of what is taking place in each hive and this can only be accurately learned by examination of the combs. In order to do this, they must be movable and the combs must be straight and not stuck together. When foundation is properly used, straight combs always result.

Where bees are allowed to build their own combs either from starters or without guidance, much drone comb is nearly always built. Drones (the males), are consumers and never producers in the bee hive and only the minimum number should be raised. By using full sheets of foundation in the brood chamber, full combs of almost entirely worker cells result. Since these combs will last for years, it is very poor bee-keeping to use less than full sheets of foundation in brood frames at any time.

Since the foundation is partly drawn out into cell sides by the bees, its use decreases the amount of work the bees must do to build new comb. It requires large quantities of honey to be consumed by the bees to construct wax combs. If you use foundation, you get this honey in surplus instead of its use for comb building. Foundation is also used in both comb and extracted honey supers to guide the bees in building straight combs, to increase the good appearance of sections and reduce bee labor. The more foundation you use, the more surplus honey you should get.

Use Heavy Grades

Medium brood foundation should be used in the hive bodies and extra thin surplus in the comb honey supers. Lighter grades are being discarded by many practical beekeepers. Great losses frequently result from the sagging of brood combs after they are built, since sagging stretches many of the cells out of shape and they cannot then be used for worker brood. The use of heavier wired grades of foundation will obviate sagging in hive bodies. The Dadants are co-operating by producing heavier grades of medium brood foundation than 8 sheets to the pound. The use of lighter foundation for brood chambers is not advisable.

What Causes Sagging

Sagging of combs sometimes occurs a year or two after they are built. The weight of honey or bees during warm weather may cause this. Swarms should not be hived on foundation which is not securely fastened to the top bar of the frames.

How to Use Comb Foundation

Foundation prevents the combs from sagging, and permits the use of a sheet of foundation which will extend into the bottom bar of the frame. More perfect combs entirely filling the frames are, therefore, assured. Much labor is saved by not having to wire the frames. By driving the nails in through the side of the new style wedges to fasten in foundation, better top bar attachment of combs will result.

Necessity of Wired Foundation

It is folly to use foundation in hive bodies unless it is wired. With more wires in the foundation, less sagging will result. The wires must be adequately fastened to the foundation, or poor results will follow. Not less than four wires should be used to a frame, when put in horizontally. There is no better instrument for this than the electric imbedder which melts the foundation over the wires. In cooling, the wax holds to the wires securely. The use of enough vertical wires will reduce sagging of combs to a minimum. Beekeepers usually do not take enough care in wiring frames or inserting foundation to insure fair results. The use of full sheets and careful workmanship is cheap insurance for good combs.

CRANBERRY CULTURE

The culture of cranberries, although not a widely established industry in Canada, can be conducted with profit in many sections which at present know practically nothing of the growing and care of this crop. Very few cranberries are grown in Canada outside of the provinces of Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, Quebec, and British Columbia. When properly cared for, a cranberry bog will produce from forty to fifty barrels of fruit to the acre, and thirty barrels is an average crop. The selling price is usually from $5 to $7 a barrel. Certain natural conditions are necessary for a cranberry plantation. These are described in Bulletin No. 19 of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, which gives full instructions for building up a plantation and handling the crop. It is shown that a considerable amount of money is needed to construct a cranberry bog from rough land. A sixteen acre bog in Nova Scotia, it is stated, was purchased, cleared, tilled, ditched, sanded, dyked and planted for the sum of $4,500. A considerable amount of forest growth had to be removed in this operation. The returns, however, from a productive bog would seem to justify this original expenditure.

Montreal Honors First Skipper in Port

1. C.P.S.S. Montrose bringing first passengers to Montreal, 1923 Season. 2. Captain Edmund Allman, Commander of the Bollingbroke.

TWENTY years ago Montreal was but a "mere calling place for ships." It had practically no modern cargo-handling devices or equipment, its wharf sheds were just wooden shacks which were actually taken down in winter to prevent them being blown away, and much of the merchandise was stored in the open air at the mercy of the wind and weather. Now Montreal is the greatest port of Canada and it is the best located. From a mere riverside stopping place for ships, it has stepped into the front rank of ocean ports, and has become equipped with facilities for the accommodation of ships and for the handling and storing of freight that are unrivalled on the continent. Despite the fact that Canada has less than 10,000,000 population and that the United States has more than 110,000,000, Montreal now handles a greater volume of business than any port on the American continent.

The principal reasons for Montreal's supremacy are facts that it is nearly one thousand miles inland from the ocean, at the head of deep water navigation with direct access to the Atlantic, and that behind it is a through route right up to the head of the Lakes at the Twin Cities, a thousand miles further inland. Were it an all year port, Montreal would be the chief one of the continent, but for some months winter closes the beautiful St. Lawrence route, and the vessels fretting at the mouth of the great river must wait until the ice goes out in the spring before they can make their way westward. About fifty years ago, the Harbor Master originated the idea of presenting a tall silk hat to the captain of the first vessel to arrive in the spring with a transatlantic ship. This custom was observed for about thirty-five years, then, as the top hats lost their popularity, a gold headed cane was presented instead by the Harbor Commission.

This year the cane was presented to Captain Edmund Allman, of the Canadian Pacific S.S. Bollingbroke who had just completed his first voyage in command. The Bollingbroke left London for Montreal on April 6th, calling at Antwerp en-route, arriving three hours ahead of her nearest competitor on May 3rd. The liner "Montrose" of the same line, the first passenger vessel to reach the port in 1923, arrived two days after.

The Veiled Idol

"He was a person of considerable muscular charms," concluded the long-winded station-master, anxious to air his descriptive English, "young and of prepossessing face and garments. I was being too distracted by his questions to notice much the color of his visual optics, but I am thinking that they look two ways at once. He had an expression the most irascible when I—"

"Oh, that will do, please," said Lindsay impatiently. "There is one other piece of information you might be able to give me. Have you ever heard of a man named Spriggs—Corporal Spriggs—in these parts?"

The Babu shook his head with the air of a man who has already had enough of the subject and does not want to be worried again. "No," he said; "I do not know anything about him, or the name. There is no English sahib having residence in this locality, as I was this morning telling the other sahib, who also made inquiry about Spriggs. It is a coincidence of the most simultaneous kind."

This was a clinching argument against delay, and Lindsay at once expressed his intention of going on to Chanda village that night. Mana, inwardly grumbling, prepared to obey, but the station-master, looking his suspicions of the passenger's sanity, was proceeding to descend on the "improvidence" of the undertaking, when Lindsay slipped ten rupees into the dusky hand with a request to be told the nearest route. Babu Gokul Dass promptly descended from eloquence to facts. There was only one road running from the station gates, he said, and it led straight to Chanda. For eight miles the way lay through open country, for the two last through jungle.

Five minutes later Lindsay Cathcart strode out of the station yard with his servant at his heels. As for the walk before him it was nothing to an ex-champion of the running-path, and his muscles needed exercise after the cramping of the four days' railway journey. Though, if the walk had been fifty times as tedious, he would have had to take it, under the unexpected development.

It was past eight o'clock when they started, and the hot earth was cooling quickly now that the sun-heat had died away. Save for the occasional swish of a flying-fox, or the wail of a jackal, intense silence reigned, and, for the first time, Lindsay knew the enjoyment of being abroad under the Indian stars.

The road was merely the unhedged track of bullock-carts, and the first two miles they traversed without seeing a sign of human life. But between the second and third mile they came upon a cluster of huts, outside which a few tired coolies were squatting, dimly seen like silent ghosts. As the "Feringhi" and his servant went by, however, the group began to jabber in an unintelligible patois, and one of the uncouth figures rose and pointed jeeringly at them.

When they had passed, Mana ranged up alongside, and said, nervously—
"Country people laugh rude at sahib, and say he going, to make poojah (prayers) to Situ. This very wild place for sahib to walk at night."

Lindsay began to be convinced that he was doing an unusual thing, and he was not sorry that he had a six-shot Colt in his pocket. "Who is Situ?" he asked.

"Situ is the god of Chanda temple," was the reply. "There be many gods there, but Situ is the greatest of all."

At last, after they had walked smartly for over two hours, the ground began to rise, and cultivation yielded to low, scrubby jungle which grew denser and taller as they proceeded, till on both sides they were enshrouded in blackest gloom. Only by the full moon overhead was their way made clear, and then suddenly it appeared to stop dead, barred by impenetrable undergrowth. But on reaching the point where the wood seemed to bid them halt they found that the road turned at a right angle, and at the same moment they heard the monotonous beating of a tom-tom.

Rounding the sharp corner Lindsay thrilled at the discovery that he was within sight of his goal. Some way ahead the road opened out, and at the end of the widening vista, there was a great clearing where were many dwellings and lights and moving figures. And at the back of all there stood out, shining white in the moon's rays, a great pillar-fronted building with a gaping, black-mouthed portal, and a domed roof, from which a number of rotting flags drooped lazily.

As they neared the village Lindsay looked at his watch and saw that it was close on eleven o'clock. An Indian gaum is never really asleep. No sooner were they among the houses than the place began to hum like a hive, and there was a sensation as of countless eyes watching them from many unseen points of vantage. Lindsay had not advanced far before he found that as by magic he had become the centre of a crowd of silent-stepping forms who kept pace with him. At first, though they murmured among themselves continuously, they offered no hindrance; but soon a tall, wild-eyed native stepped to the front, and, barring the way, addressed a few words menacingly to Mana in a dialect unknown to Lindsay.

"What does he want?" said the latter.

"He want to know what is the sahib's business," replied Mana, looking scared. "Sahib better take care," he added in an undertone; "these people very fierce—not like fo! in towns."

"Tell him—but stay, perhaps he will understand me," replied Lindsay, and addressing the obstructor in Hindustani, he said: "I desire to see your head-man. If my business with him is successful, I shall make a handsome present to the village."

"The head-man is the chief priest of the temple," returned the spokesman, with a none too friendly glance. "I will conduct the sahib to him, but the servant," with a scowl at the trembling Mana, "being of our religion, must go no nearer to the temple till he has been purified."

"Lead on!" said Lindsay, and the crowd divided, half remaining clustered about Mana, and the rest pressing on toward the temple. The tall man walked by Lindsay's side, watching him furtively, but evincing no further curiosity. Seeing that his allusion to backsheesh had been efficacious, Lindsay tried to question him further—had another Englishman visited the village that day?

"The priest can alone talk on such matters," was the curt reply.

The place was of the nature of a cul-de-sac, having the temple at the far end, with thick jungle and rising ground behind it. There was an open space of a hundred yards between the end of the street and the great building, in the vicinity of which there were no houses except two or three huts occupied by the attendant priests. After crossing the open space the conductor, made for the hut nearest to the temple and called loudly to those within. A singsong whining voice answered, and an animated conversation followed.

Meanwhile Lindsay waited in the midst of the knot of natives. He noticed that they had grown singularly quiet, here in the temple precincts, and he was fain to admit that there was something weird and awe-inspiring in the dark yawning entrance—with its suggestion of hidden mysteries within.

From the far depths of the gloomy interior of the temple came a tiny glimmer of light, as though a lamp were kept burning for reasons of religion rather than of illumination; but not a sound betokened that there was anything having life in the temple.

Lindsay was not there for sight-seeing, and he soon waxed impatient of the prolonged delay. Realizing that so much talk boded no good to his enterprise, he determined to interrupt, and in his pre-occupation forgot himself so far as to use the English tongue.

"Come! hurry up there," he called out. "Don't keep me waiting here all night."

He had no time to rectify his error with a translation, and the man in the priest's doorway had barely turned to him, when he started as if stung. For hardly had the words left his mouth when, as though in answer, there issued from the black portal of the temple a short, piercing cry, almost a scream, in English.

"Help! For God's sake, help!"

Long may it remain the first impulse of the Briton to succor a fellow-countryman in his need. Knowing little and caring less about the jealousy with which Hindus guard their shrines from heretical pollution, Lindsay sank all other considerations, and leaping clear of the throng rushed for the temple. The natives sent up one long howl of rage and dismay, and were after him in a flash, but they failed to reach him before he was through the entrance. On the threshold they paused, forbidden by their ordinances to enter without the sanction of the priests.

Taking advantage of this respite, Lindsay peered round for the author of the cry; but except where a sputtering cocoa-nut oil lamp shed a feeble glimmer the whole interior was wrapped in darkness. He could see nothing.

"Where are you?" he shouted.

"Here—in front, to the right!" came the answer. "For Heaven's sake be quick. I am chained to the wall!"

With a cry of horror Lindsay groped his way in the direction of the voice, which came from the gloom beyond the radius of the lamp-light.

"Are you the Englishman, Dowsett, who came up here this morning?" he asked, stumbling across the uneven floor.

"Yes, that's me," replied the unseen; "but please, Mr. Cathcart, look as slippy as you can. Those devils won't let you alone long. Just hark to their noise."

Certain that he was on the verge of discovering the clue to the mystery of the diamond, Lindsay snatched up the sacred lamp, and holding it above his head threw its feeble light on two human forms flattened out side by side against the back wall of a recess. One was shrouded from head to foot in a great white sheet which had an opening where the bright eye should have been, and through this slit there shone a pale phosphorescent gleam that was like no eye that Lindsay had ever seen before. So terrible was the effect of the motionless, veiled figure with the glittering, lurid stare that for a few seconds he could not remove his gaze. Then he looked at the other form, and saw that his fellow-passenger of the Masdell was indeed in sorry case. Dowsett's limbs were encased by an iron chain which was fastened to staples in the wall. He could move neither hand nor foot.

"How did you come to this plight—who is that next you?" asked Lindsay sternly.

"That is the skeleton of my father, who was known as Corporal Spriggs; and that infernal eye of his is the diamond," was the astounding reply. "I got into this hobble through coming to lift it. They've been worshipping him as a god, and finding I'm his son they're on the same lay with me. I'll tell you all I know, if you ever get out of this alive."

"That is a contingency which I very much doubt," said Lindsay, pulling out and cocking his revolver, for at this moment there surged into the temple a great concourse of natives bearing torches and making the domed roof ring with fierce cries of hate.

CHAPTER XI.

"The Promised Land"

Six weeks had passed since that midnight drive ended at the Grey House. It was evening and to Mr. Simon Vantrabce, sitting once again in the snug seclusion of his "office," entered Nurse Elmslie. The asylum-keeper welcomed her with a less more father-like than paternal, and though she had her own reasons for not wishing to ruffle her employer, she refused to be sitting down and make herself fit to be in the other part of the

"You sent for me," she said in her most official manner, and letting her bold eyes do duty for her tongue in a plain warning that she wanted no familiarities of that kind from Victor's father.

"Yes," replied Simon; "I wanted to talk to you about the Milborne girl. She ain't cut up real rusty yet—nothing as we can clap her in the refractory ward for?"

Nurse Elmslie's handsome face darkened at the mention of a name that had been obnoxious to her even before she had seen its owner. Yet she told herself frequently that she had no real cause for the jealousy that made her hate the patient in whom her employer's son was interested. Victor Vantrabce had been less at the asylum than usual during Kate's sojourn there, and he had never once evinced any desire to see her, on the contrary taking considerable pains to avoid coming within her view.

"No," was the nurse's answer, "she's quiet, but full of pluck. From the dance she led Highton the night when he brought her in I expected ructions before now, but I have worked hard to get a rise out of her without any result. Not that she's one of the weak, take-anything-you-please sort. It seems as if she was just waiting confidently for something to turn up."

"Well, I must hurry her a bit," said Simon after a moment's thought. "There's an order come today from—ahem—her relatives, to put the screw on, and I should like to give her a taste of the 'refractory.' Only you know as well as I do that it must be for cause that will satisfy the visiting justices next time they come fooling round. How can we touch her on the raw and make her kick? You see, 'tain't as if she was right-down raving loony; she ain't so very bad but what she'll remember things, and being a pretty little baggage the visiting beaks might believe her."

Nurse Elmslie, knowing that Kate was as sane as any one in the kingdom, smiled at the thin fiction of her not being "so very bad." She felt inclined to wink, but she knew that Simon would take advantage, so she had recourse to flattery. If there was one thing on which Mr. Vantrabce, senior, took pride, it was on what he called "the management of loonies," which, translated into plain English, meant, the driving of sane people mad.

"It appears to be a case for your own ingenuity, sir," she said demurely, and guessing that she had been sent for to hear a suggestion.

Simon grinned and waddled across to inspect a card that hung on the wall. It was the program of the fare supplied, week in week out, with unvarying monotony to the patient.

"Female side, Wednesday: Breakfast, porridge," he read out. "How'd it be to make her refuse her food, Elmslie? That would look well in the report, and if she'd done it she couldn't deny it, could she?"

"An excellent idea, sir—one of your best," said the nurse, with a gleam in her dark eyes. "Miss Milborne has a healthy appetite, though."

"But it won't be so 'ealthy if you take a little tip I'm going to give you," chuckled Simon. "All you've got to do is to mix 'arf-an-ounce of cayenne with her portion of porridge—see what I mean?"

Nurse Elmslie saw and rejoiced. It was the dearest wish of her heart to have Kate in the refractory ward, about the unhappy occupants of which no questions were asked by authorized visitors if they were found bruised and maimed. In that world-apartment the excuse of "self-inflicted injuries" always prevailed—provided certain unwritten laws of the torture-chamber, made in the interest of the executioners, were observed. But one trivial detail remained.

"That ought to do it—if we have any cayenne in the house," she said. "Ask Hanlon," laughed Simon. "He had a lot the other day for burning on a shovel in the male 'refractory.' You might try that dodge on your side some day. Sets 'em sneezing and coughing and keeps 'em quiet."

"You are a masterpiece," laughed Nurse Elmslie, and promising to put the dastardly plan in operation she went away.

It was Mr. Simon Vantrabce's practice to take his meals with his own family in the private wing, and on his meeting his wife and daughter the next morning at the breakfast-table he was seen to be in high good humor. He whistled cheerfully as he clipped his egg, and abstained from abusing his wife—a faded, squashed-looking woman, whom years of domestic tyranny had rendered nearly imbecile. The gloomy associations of a mad-house and her husband's temper combined had played havoc with an easy-going nature. Mrs. Vantrabce was much more fit to be in the other part of the house than many of the unfortunates imprisoned there.

Not so Miss Lottie Vantrabce, a pudding-faced, snub-nosed spinster of thirty, who was much too wrapped up in what she considered her own grievances to be affected by the miseries of others. The chief of these grievances was that her father's vocation had, she thought, debarred her from being received in "Society" and so making a good match; while the second was that Nature had not been so bountiful to her in what passed for "style" among the Vantrabces as to her brother Victor. She admired Victor immensely, but she was also envious of him because his mode of life enabled him to consort with the raffish of the peerage.

"You seem chirpy this morning," she said to her father. "What is it—a new patient, or is Victor expected? It's bound to be one of the two."

Simon cast a queer look at her. He hated to be chaffed about his business; but he had a wholesome dread of his daughter's sharp tongue, and put up with more from her than any one except his idolized son.

"Yes, Victor's coming down to-day," he replied. "I had a message from him last night. He won't have much time to waste talking to you about the haristocracy, though. He's got a job to settle with me."

"I'll be bound he'll find time to have a chat with Elmslie, or she'll know the reason why, if he doesn't," said the fair Lottie spitefully. She knew that Simon had a sneaking admiration for the handsome nurse, and she hoped that the allusion would annoy him. In this, however, she was disappointed, for her father received the remark with one of his oily chuckles.

"Vic's got other fish to fry besides Elmslie," he retorted. "Fatter and juicier ones. I shouldn't wonder if our Victor don't collar an 'eiress in her own right before he's a month older. Then there might be a chance for you, Lottie, if you keep a civil tongue in your 'ead," he added diplomatically, hoping for quiet times. "Perhaps the gal will have brothers or cousins or some one for you to cotton to."

"If there's swells coming to court Lottie I shall want some new blue china," remarked Mrs. Vantrabce humbly. "And I hope they'll come to the right door. Simon 'Twouldn't look well for a live lord to drive up to the asylum entrance and hear 'em howling in the refractory. Poor creatures! I've half a mind to go and turn them all loose sometimes."

"If you tried any such game, I'd clap you in yourself, your old marplot," shouted the indignant proprietor. "Ere am I, everlasting scheming for the benefit of loonies and their friends, and you as have sworn to honner and obey me, flings it in my teeth. I shall have to teach you—"

The family jar was interrupted by a tap at the door, and Nurse Elmslie entered, sleek and graceful, like a handsome tigress. Her cruel mouth curled slightly as she flung a defiant glance at Lottie, whom she hated, but she addressed herself respectfully to her employer.

"I should be glad if you would come to the female ward, sir," she said. "One of the patients refuses her food."

Simon's little pig-eyes twinkled, and gulping down his coffee he rose and accompanied the nurse.

"It came off then—the cayenne dodge!" he sniggered when they had left the room.

"At the first spoonful. It nearly choked her, and quite choked me—with laughing," replied Nurse Elmslie, smiling at the reminiscence.

Simon took down a heavy dog-whip from the rack in the passage, and together they passed through a balze-covered door, that shut off the asylum proper from the private wing, and led to the entrance-hall of the old mansion. On one side of the hall the reception-rooms were used for show—that is for impressing the relatives of patients—and were accordingly fairly well furnished. On the other side were the day wards of such patients as were accorded a limited amount of liberty. Followed by the nurse, Simon Vantrabce strode into the room set apart for the female patients.

Two long tables ran down the centre of the room, from which three slatternly maids were clearing the breakfast-things—porridge-bowls and wooden spoons. Mr. Vantrabce's prospect spoke of "every luxury of the season," but that by the way. All the patients but one had finished their meal, and were either talking in groups in varying degrees of rationality, or gibbering aimlessly to themselves under the watchful eye of a male keeper and a few subordinated nurses.

fate was not more kind to them after they had settled here. Forty-five of their number were carried off by fever in the first year and the war of 1812 wiped out the settlement, homes, stock and crops.

In 1812 Lord Selkirk's agent, Colin Robinson, of the Isle of Lewis, persuaded a number of his fellow Islanders to whom the abolition of the Clan system had brought high rents and misery, to settle in the Red River district. This party encountered the hostility of the Indians and, through their industry and progress, won the jealousy of the white traders. When the settlement was wiped out on one occasion and many of them wiped out, the remainder were forced to leave. However, they returned in time to harvest the western wheat crop and many attribute to this fact that Winnipeg stands where it does to-day.

Life will not be a bed of roses for those who have newly arrived and they will have to work, and hard; but this they can do. They are the descendants of the "lords of the Isles" who by strength of arms repulsed the invasions of the Scandinavians and Scots. Social and industrial development was retarded in a great extent by the clan system, but those who have adopted Canada are well educated and a simple life of toil in adversity through generations has given them a splendid physique and simple dignity. Although forced by hard times to leave their homes to make new ones, most of them are in sufficient funds and not a few families aboard the Mologama were possessed of over £1,000, some have property in Canada and the larger proportion of them have gone to Red Deer, Alberta, where they will form a small colony.

Typical of many types.

THE Hebrideans are a home loving race of people not much given to wandering from their native hearths, but the arrival at St. John aboard the Canadian Pacific steamship Marloch and Mologama of over six hundred sturdy men and women of the western Isles forced by even necessity to seek their fortunes in the land of promise is not without precedent. In the year 1803 a contingent of 111 was brought from the Isle of Mull by Lord Selkirk to develop the sheep industry on St. Clair Plains, Kent County. If times were hard when these people left home,

ANNUAL AGRICULTURAL STATISTICS, CANADA, 1923

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics announces the completion of its arrangements for collection next month of the annual agricultural statistics of Canada. Following plans begun five years ago in co-operation with the Provincial governments, the returns are collected annually by means of a simple schedule, calling for a statement of the areas sown to field crops and of the numbers of farm animals alive on June 15. When completed they are compiled into totals by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, and the areas, as finally estimated, form the basis for the estimation after harvest of the yields of field crops.

In all save three of the provinces, viz., Prince Edward Island, Quebec and British Columbia, the cards will be distributed next month, as in previous years, through the agency of the rural schools. In British Columbia the cards are mailed direct to farmers. This year for the first time, the plan of mailing direct will also be applied to Prince Edward Island. In Quebec, a modification of previous plans is also this year being put into operation by the Quebec Bureau of Statistics. Instead of the cards being issued through the rural schools as heretofore, they will be distributed by local agents under the direction of the agronomists or district agricultural representatives.

In view of the special importance of the cereal crops of the Prairie provinces, it is proposed this year to give them separate precedence of compilation, with a view to publication of the estimates for wheat, oats, rye, barley, and flax, earlier than is possible when the results depend upon completion of the whole work.

Early and trustworthy estimates of the field crops of Canada are urgently required by all interests connected with the national basic industry of agriculture, including those of the elevator companies, transportation companies, bankers, insurance societies, grain merchants, millers, and a large number of other mercantile concerns, whilst such information is essential to farmers themselves, in order that they may be placed upon a level with traders in the grain markets, and not be prejudiced through ignorance of actual facts.

In connection with wheat of which Canada is now the world's second or third largest producer, and the world's second largest exporting country, it is of the highest importance to obtain early and accurate knowledge of the world's total output, and this can only be done if Canada fail not to contribute timely statistics to the International Agricultural Institute, of which she is an adhering country.

The Bureau appeals therefore to all farmers who receive the schedule to return it duly completed without fail. Should they not receive the card by the middle of June, they should apply for one, either to their local school teacher, their local department of agriculture, or the Dominion Bureau of Statistics at Ottawa. Farmers are positively assured that the returns collected have no connection with taxation. The officers of the Bureau are all sworn to secrecy, and no individual return is divulged, the estimates based upon collected totals alone being published.

DEATH OF OLD RESIDENT

Passed away last Saturday morning William Moore in his 81 year at the home of his brother, First street, Sidney. The funeral took place Tuesday at 3 p.m. to Holy Trinity church. The service at the church was conducted by the Rev. T. M. Hughes. The pallbearers were: Messrs. A. Ego, Julius Brothour, S. Roberts, J. S. Brothour and J. Matthews.

SHIPPING BACON IN BALES

The difference between the manner in which Danish and Canadian ship their bacon to the British market is that the Danes ship the sides in bales, whereas the usual Canadian custom is to pack in boxes. Some of the Canadian packing houses, however, have adopted the bale method and are finding it satisfactory. A bale contains four sides wrapped in cheesecloth and covered with jute sack. The Peterboro' packing house has adopted this method, shipping about twenty percent of its bacon in bales. Only such sides as will make nearest Wiltshire, and are as nearly as possible identical with the Danish sides of the first grade, are chosen. The percentage corresponds very closely with the percentage of "selects" that are taken in at the Peterboro' packing house, indicating that the select bacon bag, as identified on foot, is the type that is actually turning out the higher priced product.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT-ING HOME GROUNDS

As one result of the wide-spread movements for outdoor improvement that have swept the country, awakening the latent civic pride of individuals and in many cases, of entire communities, considerable progress has been made toward making our country more beautiful.

The neglected grounds of many school houses and public play grounds have been beautified, waste places reclaimed, vacant lots redeemed, back yards tidied and the home grounds generally made more attractive and livable.

As landscape gardening is an art not widely understood or appreciated, it is not at all surprising that mistakes have been made in some of these attempts to beautify. But if these efforts have been instrumental in removing the untidy, tell-tale signs from heretofore neglected, slovenly places, making the premises more pleasing and orderly in appearance, they have surely not been in vain.

It is much easier to criticize than to rectify, but a few simple suggestions as to what constitutes artistic planting, may be of some assistance in correcting, or at least modifying, the poor effects of most flagrant errors. Haphazard planting and crowding cause most of the troubles. To set out quantities of trees, shrubs and plants at random without a well defined decorative idea in mind, is bound to produce a "crazy quilt" effect that is confusing and disquieting.

As an artist first makes a study or sketch of a painting he desires to create, so the amateur landscape gardener should study carefully the possibilities of the area to be beautified, and compose a planting scheme that will be harmonious. In this working plan, aim to secure a large and unbroken vista of velvety lawn as is possible as this gives a restful effect of spaciousness. Effectively grouped shrubs and plants may be used to round out angles, screen off undesirable objects and to form a kind of frame along the boundaries or division walls of fences. They should never, for good effect, be dotted promiscuously on the lawn proper, as such a method tends to dwarf or decrease the apparent size of the plot.

Plants graduated as to height—the tallest in the background—planted along the foundation of buildings soften the harsh outlines and serve as a sort of connecting link in the correlation of buildings and grounds. Stiff, formal lines in the border may be avoided by skillfully massing appropriate varieties, so that the groups dovetail in an irregular fashion. Trees, if used at all, on places of limited areas, are usually better in the background. Those that attain a large size are decidedly out of place in a planting scheme for small yards.

Even the diminutive city yard has its planting possibilities. If the small patch is well sodded or sown with a high grade of lawn mixture, the resulting green sward, bordered with flowering plants and graceful vines trained to drape and screen the fence of the enclosure, will form an oasis that will prove pleasing to the eye, rest to the nerves and a fitting recompense for all the effort put forth and for the faith implied.

ECONOMIC VALUE OF
DAIRY PRODUCTS

The educational work being carried on by the Dominion Dairy and Cold Storage branch is progressing apace and there is the best of reasons to believe is having its effect in an increased domestic consumption of dairy products. The consumption of cheese, butter, and especially milk is greater per capita in Canada today than it has ever before, that is at least since there has been opportunity to obtain the facts. Miss Helen G. Campbell, demonstrator and lecturer of the branch, who has recently been engaged in enlisting the services of women's institute, school teachers, and welfare workers generally, in the campaign of education in the value to health and prosperity of dairy products, points out that beyond their commercial importance is their economic importance, "as the dairy industry almost more than any other makes use of the roughage that would otherwise be wasted, and converts it into valuable commodities." Its greatest importance lies, however, in the food thus made available for human consumption. During the winter Miss Campbell was engaged in delivering lectures on the food value of milk at a number of centres. One point where addresses were given, the City Council offered prizes for essays and posters by the school children, and the work done was surprisingly good.

The juice of a lemon added to the water in which yellowed clothes are to be boiled will bleach them nice and white.

To Kill Worms

To exterminate earth worms from potted plants, thrust unburnt matches, head down, into the earth around the plants. Use from two to five matches, according to the size of the plant.

Don't Spoil Them

When washing silk stockings with cloths of a different color, be very careful that the water is just lukewarm and that every particle of soap is rinsed out of them. Otherwise the cloths are apt to run and streak the stockings.

Jot It Down

Wash all uncooked fruit before using. Hot, strong, black coffee will usually stop hiccoughs.

A paste of borax and cold water will remove chocolate stains.

Ground cinnamon sprinkled on top of the stove will remove disagreeable odors.

Plant the grapefruit seed. It makes a delightful little plant to fill up that empty fern dish.

Roast Pork

The skin of roast pork will be crisp and brown if a little salt is rubbed on it before putting it in the oven.

A Cleaner Wick

It is almost impossible to trim a lamp wick with scissors and get it clean and straight. Rub the burned part off with an old cloth.

For Baby

The ideal washcloth for baby's bath is the one made of three or four thicknesses of gauze, bound around the edge with a soft ribbon or worked around with a soft finished crochet cotton.

Fudge

When mailing fudge to anyone, wrap each piece in waxed paper before putting it in a box. It is the only way to insure it against getting stale and becoming hard.

Peanut Brittle

Add a pinch of salt and a few drops of vanilla to the peanut brittle and note the improvement.

Weights and Measures

Two gills equal one cup, and two cups equal one pint, two pints a quart and four quarts a gallon. A peck is eight quarts.

The following all equal a pound: Four cups flour; two cups solid butter; two cups granulated sugar; three cups corn meal; two and two-thirds cups powdered sugar; two and two-thirds cups brown sugar; two cups solid meat; five cups coffee; sixteen ounces—three and three-quarter cups of unsifted pastry flour; five and one-half cups pulverized coffee; three cups of rye flour.

A pound of coffee makes forty cups of ordinary strength. A pound of butter makes forty butter balls when serving a large assemblage.

A teaspoonful equals 60 drops of liquid. A tablespoonful contains three times the contents of a teaspoon. In measuring dry ingredients by spoonfuls, dip the spoon in the ingredient and bring up full, then level off with knife blade.

All measurements are level unless specified as "rounding" or heaping.

One cup liquid to three cups of flour makes dough; one cup liquid to two cups flour makes thick batter; one cup liquid to one cup flour makes thin batter; one teaspoonful cream of tartar plus one-half teaspoonful soda makes two teaspoonfuls baking powder.

A Chinese gentleman always sends a pair of geese to the lady of his choice, and they are looked upon as the emblems of conjugal fidelity.

PREVENTION OF APPLE SCAB

Early Spraying of the Orchard Important

How many times to spray the apple orchard is a matter of concern to most orchardists. From the results of experiments carried on by the Division of Horticulture of the Dominion Experimental Farms, as outlined in a recently issued bulletin on "Modern Orchard Practices," it appears absolutely necessary to make at least five sprayings to control apple scab effectively in bad seasons. In the opinion of the author, Mr. M. B. Davis, who is chief assistant horticulturist, the importance of early sprays as an insurance against the loss of crop has been neglected and over-looked too much in the past. It is the early sprays, he says, which saves the crop. The wise man sprays from the early spring to make his crop set.

Apple scab is a disease that spreads or reproduces itself by spores so minute that they cannot be discerned with the naked eye. When the weather becomes sufficiently mild to start the trees, these spores are liberated from the old leaves and infest the young leaves, reproducing new spores in a very few days. By the time the blossoms are ready to burst there may be many millions of these spores ready to infect them. At this stage the pistil, which will ultimately ripen into an apple, is very tender and if attacked by a germinating spore, which sends out roots to penetrate the skin, will be killed and the chances of a crop ruined. Ravages of scab are often attributed to imperfect pollination or frost when in reality black spot or scab is the cause of the loss. Cool, moist weather, such as we have in spring, is the most favorable for the development of scab, which spreads but little during the summer. Thus the important sprays are the early ones. Spraying is a preventative, and cannot repair damage already done. It prevents the development of the germinating spore. The bulletin here referred to goes very thoroughly into the details of the cultivation, spraying and management of the apple orchard.

On Friday Mrs. Pierce arrived from Vancouver to stay with Mrs. Porter.

I hope everybody got a piece of that excellent calf Mr. Naylor killed this week.

Thomas Meighan, Paramount star, and his well-balanced cast, including Leatrice Joy, leading woman, and five famous screen kiddies, Charlotte Jackson, Barbara Maier, Bruce Guerin and the mischievous DeBriac Twins, present a splendid performance of "The Bachelor Daddy," which will be shown at the Auditorium theatre Friday and Saturday evenings.

The picture has a pleasing theme of a man's love for five motherless children entrusted to his care by a dying friend. He brings the children to his home, to the disgust of his intended bride and to the delight of his private secretary. As the story develops, blind love is awakened with surprising results. The picture is based on Edward Peple's novel "The Proxy Daddy," and was filmed under the direction of Alfred Green.
